

Pittsburgh Regional Transit

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE (August 21, 2024) – Multiple light-rail stations on the Blue Line will be closed over the next several weekends for essential maintenance activities, Pittsburgh Regional Transit announced today.

The closures will allow crews to apply an epoxy coating that seals the concrete, preventing water from seeping into the concrete platforms. The work was originally scheduled last month but had to be rescheduled due to the weather.

The closures will occur from 8 p.m. each Fridays until the start of service the following Monday unless otherwise noted below. On Thursdays preceding the closure, riders will only be able to board and disembark from the first car of two-car trains.

The schedule for station closures will be:

- Boggs Station: Closed from 8 p.m. Friday, August 23, until the start of service on Monday, August 26. Riders should instead use Bon Air or South Hills Junction.
- Denise Station: Closed from 8 p.m. Friday, September 6, until the start of service on Monday, September 9. Riders should instead use Bon Air or South Bank.
- Memorial Hall Station: Closed from 8 p.m. Friday, September 13, until the start of service on Monday, September 16. Riders should instead use Willow or Killarney.
- Overbrook Junction: The inbound platform will be closed from 7 a.m. on Thursday, September 26 to the start of service on Monday, September 30. A temporary low-level platform will be constructed, and riders will board and exit rail cars using the temporary platform. Riders who need to use the ramp should instead board Blue Line or Silver Line rail cars at nearby Willow Station. Those who specifically need to use the Red Line should board rail cars at Castle Shannon Station or Washington Junction.

No work will be conducted the weekend of August 31 to September 2 due to the Labor Day holiday. Similar station maintenance will be conducted in October and possibly November. Since this work is outdoors it is highly weather-dependent.
